DEAR MR. I don't believe Madame Blazette gave my little quite enough pensance. Maybe it's this light, but it does seem to me that just a little more scenery, taken more right here, on this side of my pompador would make it look brighter. You can stand a lot of golden hair when you've got on mourning. They sort of tone each other up—or down—and bring each other out, and if there is any more fetching combination than a blonde woman in black I don't know it.

It looks almost providential. Sort of consolation for all you've lost.
